Proctoring examinations is a service provided for Library cardholders upon request and based on the availability of staff. If the student requires the use of a Library computer to complete the exam, the student must have a Library card in good standing and is responsible for making their own computer reservation. Staff will remove the filtering software and/or extend the time to accommodate the maximum time allowed for the examination. There is no fee for proctoring an examination, but the student is responsible for any incidental costs associated with the examination, such as postage or faxing. If the examination is to be returned by mail, the student must provide a prepaid envelope if it is not included as part of the packet.

Students are asked to schedule the proctor date with staff at least one week in advance to provide time to make all the necessary arrangements. Preferable times to schedule examinations are during regular Library hours Monday through Friday, but requests for weekend proctoring will be considered and accommodated according to staff availability. The Library reserves the right to refuse or decline proctoring services to any individual if that request is beyond our ability to administer the exam.

- g. The Library will not sign a proctoring verification that attests to more than the staff has been able to do. The library will not proctor examinations that students bring in themselves.
- h. The proctor will answer questions concerning testing instructions, but not about testing content.
- i. Proctors will not monitor a student continuously during an examination, but will check on them periodically. The Library assumes that the student participates in an honor system with their institution. The library does not guarantee that a quiet space or room will be provided.
- j. Students should give 24 hour notice prior to cancelling or rescheduling an exam. A student will be allowed to reschedule the examination two times.

3.5 Internet Access

3.5.1 Access to Information

- a. Not all sources provide complete, accurate or current information. The Library has no control over, and will not be accountable for, information and graphics accessed through the Internet. Patrons access the Internet at their own risk. Patrons are encouraged to evaluate information carefully and check additional sources where appropriate.
- b. Web based e-mail accounts through a commercial provider or educational institution may be accessed. The individual accessing the account is responsible for knowing how to access the account from Library workstations. The Library is not responsible for lost or accessed e-mail.
- c. As required by the Code of Virginia 42.1-36.1, the Library has implemented software filtering on all its public Internet-accessible computer terminals. The Library cannot and does not guarantee that the filtering software will block all access to obscenity as defined in the Code of Virginia 18.2-372, child pornography as defined in 18.2-374.1:1, or material deemed harmful to juveniles as defined in 18.2-390. Nor can the Library guarantee that the filtering software will not restrict access to sites that may have legitimate research or other value. In order to address the over-blocking problem, patrons 18 or over may request staff members designated by the Director to disable or otherwise bypass the filter to enable access for bona fide research or other lawful purposes.
- d. Ethernet ports are not available for patron use.

3.5.2 Wireless Access

- a. By using the Library's wireless access, you agree to abide by the Library's Internet Access Policy.

- b. Persons under the age of 18 may use the Internet only with written consent from a parent or legal guardian. Children under the age of 12 must be accompanied by a responsible adult when using the Internet.
- c. Failure to follow Library Internet policies, guidelines or procedures can result in loss of the user's access privileges. Illegal or disruptive behavior will result in immediate termination of access and may necessarily involve intervention by law enforcement authorities. The Library reserves the right to terminate any Internet search session. Users who fail to follow the policies may indefinitely lose their access privileges, particularly in the case of repeat offenders.

3.6 Procedure for Responding to Judicial Process

- a. Except as required by law, Library staff is authorized to respond substantively to any form of judicial process that is directed to the Library, its personnel or records, or to provide any patron-specific or Library business information, in writing or in oral form, to a law enforcement officer or other person, other than a witness subpoena directed to the staff member.
- b. Judicial process and all other requests for Library information containing patron information should be forwarded immediately to the Director.
- c. Legal process is necessary to require cooperation with an investigation including answers to questions or the production of records. However, as citizens and library employees, we have an interest in the effective functioning of our law enforcement and intelligence agencies and may wish to cooperate. To the extent that an officer requests non-confidential information (e.g., requests whether a person in a photograph has been in your library), the employee may respond. The sometimes subtle distinctions between confidential and non-confidential information suggest caution.
- d. Any law enforcement officer or other individual presenting judicial process should be invited to a private area by the senior library staff member present; that staff member should request identification – a badge, a current law enforcement agency issued photo identification, and a business card – and should record the name, title, agency, and telephone number of the officer, and request a copy of the process and any associated documents.
- e. If the document is a subpoena or other form of judicial process that requires production at a future time, the officer may simply leave a copy; if a signature is requested, the senior staff member should comply. In all events, the person authorized to and accepting the subpoena should note orally and in writing that “service is accepted in official capacity only.”
- f. Certain processes such as search warrants, authorize immediate search and seizure and the Library must comply with the warrant and the instructions of the officer; the staff member will inform the officer that the Director and Counsel will be contacted immediately.
- g. The staff member will be polite and friendly; it is important that the matter not be treated as adversarial since it is the policy of the Library to cooperate and negotiation of scope of the judicial process can often minimize the intrusion.
- h. The officer may inform the staff member that the terms of the warrant are “secret” or “sealed” and that the officer may not disclose any information relating to the warrant or execution. This does not preclude notification of the Director and Counsel.

- 1) If the officer still declines to delay, the staff member should carefully inspect the warrant and monitor the search. The objective is to minimize disruption to the operations of the Library but not impede or obstruct.

Library staff should undertake the following specific steps:

- 1) Enlist the assistance of one other senior member of the staff to work with and accompany them in order to record and remember relevant facts and events
 - 2) Ensure that the warrant is signed by a magistrate or judge
 - 3) Note exactly what records or items are authorized to be seized
 - 4) Volunteer to assist the officer by locating the information, enlisting the assistance of those on the staff who are knowledgeable, and offering to provide copies of electronic information in lieu of seizure of hardware; if recordable media is seized, request the opportunity to make copies before it is removed
 - 5) Whether or not the officer accepts assistance, the staff member should monitor the search and seizure process: note areas and rooms entered, files and computers inspected, and/or specific actions taken; attempt to make copies of all records seized; note and advise the officer if information is being seized that appears to be in excess of that authorized by the warrant; and note and advise the officer if information is being seized that is privileged (e.g., patron specific information, employee records) and ask that it be so marked
- k. At the conclusion of the search, the officer should typically provide an inventory; if not, the staff member should request a copy but not sign any statement that the inventory is accurate or complete.
 - l. Whether or not the judicial process is secret or sealed, all involved staff should be instructed not to discuss the matter with the media, patrons, family or other employees since decisions in this regard must be made by the Director and the County Attorney.

7.2 Library Bill of Rights

The American Library Association affirms that all libraries are forums for information and ideas, and that the following basic policies should guide their services.

I. Books and other library resources should be provided for the interest, information, and enlightenment of all people of the community the library serves. Materials should not be excluded because of the origin, background, or views of those contributing to their creation.

II. Libraries should provide materials and information presenting all points of view on current and historical issues. Materials should not be proscribed or removed because of partisan or doctrinal disapproval.

III. Libraries should challenge censorship in the fulfillment of their responsibility to provide information and enlightenment.

IV. Libraries should cooperate with all persons and groups concerned with resisting abridgment of free expression and free access to ideas.

V. A person's right to use a library should not be denied or abridged because of origin, age, background, or views.

VI. Libraries which make exhibit spaces and meeting rooms available to the public they serve should make such facilities available on an equitable basis, regardless of the beliefs or affiliations of individuals or groups requesting their use.

VII. All people, regardless of origin, age, background, or views, possess a right to privacy and confidentiality in their library use. Libraries should advocate for, educate about, and protect people's privacy, safeguarding all library use data, including personally identifiable information.

Adopted June 19, 1939, by the ALA Council; amended October 14, 1944; June 18, 1948; February 2, 1961; June 27, 1967; January 23, 1980; January 29, 2019.

Inclusion of "age" reaffirmed January 23, 1996.

7.3 Freedom to Read Statement

The freedom to read is essential to our democracy. It is continuously under attack. Private groups and public authorities in various parts of the country are working to remove or limit access to reading materials, to censor content in schools, to label "controversial" views, to distribute lists of "objectionable" books or authors, and to purge libraries. These actions apparently rise from a view that our national tradition of free expression is no longer valid; that censorship and suppression are needed to counter threats to safety or national security, as well as to avoid the subversion of politics and the corruption of morals. We, as individuals devoted to reading and as librarians and publishers responsible for disseminating ideas, wish to assert the public interest in the preservation of the freedom to read.

Most attempts at suppression rest on a denial of the fundamental premise of democracy: that the ordinary individual, by exercising critical judgment, will select the good and reject the bad. We trust Americans to recognize propaganda and misinformation, and to make their own decisions about what they read and believe. We do not believe they are prepared to sacrifice their heritage of a free press in order to be "protected" against what others think may be bad for them. We believe they still favor free enterprise in ideas and expression.

These efforts at suppression are related to a larger pattern of pressures being brought against education, the press, art and images, films, broadcast media, and the Internet. The problem is not only one of actual censorship. The shadow of fear cast by these pressures leads, we suspect, to an even larger voluntary curtailment of expression by those who seek to avoid controversy or unwelcome scrutiny by government officials.

Such pressure toward conformity is perhaps natural to a time of accelerated change. And yet suppression is never more dangerous than in such a time of social tension. Freedom has given the United States the elasticity to endure strain. Freedom keeps open the path of novel and creative solutions, and enables change to come by choice. Every silencing of a heresy, every enforcement of an orthodoxy, diminishes the toughness and resilience of our society and leaves it the less able to deal with controversy and difference.

Now as always in our history, reading is among our greatest freedoms. The freedom to read and write is almost the only means for making generally available ideas or manners of expression that can initially command only a small audience. The written word is the natural medium for the new idea and the untried voice from which come the original contributions to social growth. It is essential to the extended discussion that serious thought requires, and to the accumulation of knowledge and ideas into organized collections.

We believe that free communication is essential to the preservation of a free society and a creative culture. We believe that these pressures toward conformity present the danger of limiting the range and variety of inquiry and expression on which our democracy and our culture depend. We believe that every American community must jealously guard the freedom to publish and to circulate, in order to preserve its own freedom to read. We believe that publishers and librarians have a profound responsibility to give validity to that freedom to read by making it possible for the readers to choose freely from a variety of offerings.

L.E. Smoot Memorial Library Policy Manual

The freedom to read is guaranteed by the Constitution. Those with faith in free people will stand firm on these constitutional guarantees of essential rights and will exercise the responsibilities that accompany these rights.

We therefore affirm these propositions:

1. It is in the public interest for publishers and librarians to make available the widest diversity of views and expressions, including those that are unorthodox, unpopular, or considered dangerous by the majority.

Creative thought is by definition new, and what is new is different. The bearer of every new thought is a rebel until that idea is refined and tested. Totalitarian systems attempt to maintain themselves in power by the ruthless suppression of any concept that challenges the established orthodoxy. The power of a democratic system to adapt to change is vastly strengthened by the freedom of its citizens to choose widely from among conflicting opinions offered freely to them. To stifle every nonconformist idea at birth would mark the end of the democratic process. Furthermore, only through the constant activity of weighing and selecting can the democratic mind attain the strength demanded by times like these. We need to know not only what we believe but why we believe it.

2. Publishers, librarians, and booksellers do not need to endorse every idea or presentation they make available. It would conflict with the public interest for them to establish their own political, moral, or aesthetic views as a standard for determining what should be published or circulated.

Publishers and librarians serve the educational process by helping to make available knowledge and ideas required for the growth of the mind and the increase of learning. They do not foster education by imposing as mentors the patterns of their own thought. The people should have the freedom to read and consider a broader range of ideas than those that may be held by any single librarian or publisher or government or church. It is wrong that what one can read should be confined to what another thinks proper.

3. It is contrary to the public interest for publishers or librarians to bar access to writings on the basis of the personal history or political affiliations of the author.

No art or literature can flourish if it is to be measured by the political views or private lives of its creators. No society of free people can flourish that draws up lists of writers to whom it will not listen, whatever they may have to say.

4. There is no place in our society for efforts to coerce the taste of others, to confine adults to the reading matter deemed suitable for adolescents, or to inhibit the efforts of writers to achieve artistic expression.

To some, much of modern expression is shocking. But is not much of life itself shocking? We cut off literature at the source if we prevent writers from dealing with the stuff of life. Parents and teachers have a responsibility to prepare the young to meet the diversity of experiences in life to which they will be exposed, as they have a responsibility to help them learn to think critically for themselves. These are affirmative responsibilities, not to be discharged simply by preventing them from reading works for which they are not yet prepared. In these matters values differ, and values cannot be legislated; nor can machinery be devised that will suit the demands of one group without limiting the freedom of others.

5. It is not in the public interest to force a reader to accept the prejudgment of a label characterizing any expression or its author as subversive or dangerous.

The ideal of labeling presupposes the existence of individuals or groups with wisdom to determine by authority what is good or bad for others. It presupposes that individuals must be directed in making up their minds about the ideas they examine. But Americans do not need others to do their thinking for them.

6. It is the responsibility of publishers and librarians, as guardians of the people's freedom to read, to contest encroachments upon that freedom by individuals or groups seeking to impose their own standards or tastes upon the community at large; and by the government whenever it seeks to reduce or deny public access to public information.

It is inevitable in the give and take of the democratic process that the political, the moral, or the aesthetic concepts of an individual or group will occasionally collide with those of another individual or group. In a free society individuals are free to determine for themselves what they wish to read, and each group is free to determine what it will recommend to its freely associated members. But no group has the right to take the law into its own hands, and to impose its own concept of politics or morality upon other members of a democratic society. Freedom is no freedom if it is accorded only to the accepted and the inoffensive. Further, democratic societies are more safe, free, and creative when the free flow of public information is not restricted by governmental prerogative or self-censorship.

7. It is the responsibility of publishers and librarians to give full meaning to the freedom to read by providing books that enrich the quality and diversity of thought and expression. By the exercise of this affirmative responsibility, they can demonstrate that the answer to a "bad" book is a good one, the answer to a "bad" idea is a good one.

The freedom to read is of little consequence when the reader cannot obtain matter fit for that reader's purpose. What is needed is not only the absence of restraint, but the positive provision of opportunity for the people to read the best that has been thought and said. Books are the major channel by which the intellectual inheritance is handed down, and the principal means of its testing and growth. The defense of the freedom to read requires of all publishers and librarians the utmost of their faculties, and deserves of all Americans the fullest of their support.

We state these propositions neither lightly nor as easy generalizations. We here stake out a lofty claim for the value of the written word. We do so because we believe that it is possessed of enormous variety and usefulness, worthy of cherishing and keeping free. We realize that the application of these propositions may mean the dissemination of ideas and manners of expression that are repugnant to many persons. We do not state these propositions in the comfortable belief that what people read is unimportant. We believe rather that what people read is deeply important; that ideas can be dangerous; but that the suppression of ideas is fatal to a democratic society. Freedom itself is a dangerous way of life, but it is ours.

Donations From Local Authors/Creators

We sincerely appreciate local authors who are willing to support the library by donating their works. However, we are not able to add all donated material to the collection. The following paragraphs explain the standards by which materials by local authors are selected for the L. E. Smoot Memorial Library.

All materials donated to the library become the property of the Friends of the Smoot Library and are examined by library staff to determine which are to be added to the collection. The staff, in choosing materials, assures that they meet the criteria established in the L. E. Smoot Memorial Library Selection of Materials Policy. Gifts may be placed in book sales conducted by the Friends of the Library.

We select only those materials that fit within the scope of our collection. The scope of the circulating collection does not include materials that are rare, unavailable through established vendors, or sparsely owned by other public libraries of a similar size. Exceptions may be made for materials by local authors that create community interest by being featured in library or community-sponsored programs, as well as, those reviewed or publicized via local media. Please note that if your work is added to the collection, it may not remain there in perpetuity and may be removed at some point as part of ongoing collection maintenance.

Although it is necessary for us to subscribe to the above guidelines, we understand the significant effort involved in publishing one's own creation and applaud the generous spirit with which these materials are offered.
